

Patient Care at Highest Level In History, Ensminger Reports

Leonard A. Ensminger, administrator of the Torrance Memorial Hospital and one of the Board Members of the Hospital Council of Southern California told delegates to the 31st Annual Convention of the Assn. of Western Hospitals in San Francisco Tuesday that "the modern American hospital is providing the public with the highest standards of patient care in history."

The local hospital leader pointed out that the hospital serves the community 24 hours a day, seven days a week providing the finest patient care possible, furnishing medical research facilities, training nurses and internes also for the entire hospital field in the west.

Ensminger urged the public to support voluntary, pre-payment health care plans such as Blue Cross rather than permitting further government encroachment in this field and emphasized that each hospital must have the full support of everyone.

"The public should," he said, "also participate whenever possible as a volunteer in auxiliaries as well as in other hospital activities."

More than 6000 administrators, trustees, department heads, and key personnel representing 800 hospitals from the 11 Western states and British Columbia are attending the four day conclave which is concerned with the interchange of the newest ideas and techniques in hospital care and operation.
